

The house of Mr. F. R. Culp in Menallen twp., had a narrow escape from destruction by fire last week. He and his wife were visiting a neighbor at the time and during their absence, the stove became too hot and set fire to the mantle and other articles near by. Mr. Culp's son, George, who was at work in a neighboring field, discovered the fire in time to prevent the destruction of the house.

Mr. Martin Reese, of Fairfield, who was attending court at Hagerstown last week as a witness, was nearly suffocated by gas at the Franklin House on Tuesday night. He was found unconscious in his room and it was only after great trouble that he was revived.

Mr. G. W. Biesecker of Hilltown, who is running his steam mill on top of the Piney Mountain on the old Stevens estate, found in the swamp a tooth which measures $1\frac{1}{2} \times 1\frac{1}{4}$ inches on the crown and weighs $2\frac{1}{2}$ ounces. The roots are broken off judging from appearances more than an inch; a good part of the enamel is also broken or scaled off or its size would be at least an $\frac{1}{2}$ of an inch more. All that have seen it can suggest no animal of this section which has a tooth so large. Probably some one can give the information.

Hon. Lewis H. Doll, mayor of Frederick, died Friday evening, at his residence on Church street. He became ill on the street during the morning, and had been ill only a few hours, but as he was suffering from a severe case of heart failure, it was seen from the first that his condition was critical. He was a prominent merchant, and a brother-in-law of Mr. H. J. Stahle of Gettysburg.

Special Announcement.

We have made arrangements with Dr. B. J. Kendall Co., publishers of "A Treatise on the Horse and his Diseases," which will enable all our subscribers to obtain a copy of that valuable work free by sending their address (enclosing a two-cent stamp for mailing same) to Dr. B. J. Kendall Co., ENOSBURGH FALLS, VT. This book is now recognized as standard authority upon all diseases of the horse, as its phenomenal sale attests, over four million copies having been sold in the past ten years, a sale never before reached by any publication in the same period of time. We feel confident that our patrons will appreciate the work, and be glad to avail themselves of this opportunity of obtaining a valuable book.

It is necessary that you mention this paper in sending for the "Treatise." This offer will remain open for only a short time.

To CONSUMPTIVES.

The undersigned having been restored to health by simple means, after suffering for several years with a severe lung affection, and that dread disease CONSUMPTION, is anxious to make known to his fellow sufferers the means of cure. To those who desire it, he will cheerfully send (free of charge) a copy of the prescription used, which they will find a sure cure for Consumption, Asthma, Catarrh, Bronchitis and all throat and lung Maladies. He hopes all sufferers will try his Remedy, as it is available. Those desiring the prescription, which will cost them nothing, and may prove a blessing, will please address, REV. EDWARD A. WILSON, Williamsburg, Kings county, New York.

A Great Event. In one's life is the discovery of a remedy for some long-standing malady. The poison of Scrofula is in your blood. You inherited it from your ancestors. Will you transmit it to your offspring? In the great majority of cases, both Consumption and Catarrh originate in Scrofula. It is supposed to be the primary source of many other derangements of the body. Begin at once to cleanse your blood with the standard alternative,

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"For several months I was troubled with scrofulous eruptions over the whole body. My appetite was bad, and my system so prostrated that I was unable to work. After trying several remedies in vain, I resolved to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and did so with such good effect that less than one bottle Restored My Health and strength. The rapidity of the cure astonished me, as I expected the process to be long and tedious."—Frederico Mariz Fernandes, Villa Nova de Gaya, Portugal.

"For many years I was a sufferer from scrofula, until about three years ago, when I began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, since which the disease has entirely disappeared. A little child of mine, who was troubled with the same complaint, has also been cured by this medicine."—H. Brandt, Avoca, Nebr.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla PREPARED BY DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass. Sold by Druggists. $1.50 per bottle. Worth $5 a bottle.

PUBLIC SALE OF VALUABLE REAL ESTATE.

Friday, December 26th, 1890. The undersigned Administrators (with the will annexed) of the estate of D. A. and Sarah L. Melhorn, late of New Oxford Borough, Adams county, Pa., deceased, will offer for sale on the premises the following described property: No. 1, THE MANSION PROPERTY, situate on Pitt street, in the borough of New Oxford, fronting 30 feet on Pitt street, by 180 feet deep, improved with a two-story weatherboarded dwelling house with back building attached, large double frame stable, ice cream manufactory, ice house, engine house, hog pen, chicken house, &c., two wells of water (one at house and one at stable), large cistern in kitchen, some fruit, &c. Everything on the property is in the best of repair, and it is a very desirable home. This property has been used as an ice cream manufactory for ten years or more, and has every convenience for such an establishment. No. 2, A TRACT OF LAND, containing about five acres, situate on High street, in New Oxford Borough, adjoining lands of A. J. Giden, Mrs. Helen Hendrix, and A. C. Diehl. This is a very desirable tract of land (under a very high state of cultivation) either for farming or building, and will be sold as a whole or in building lots, to the best advantage to the estate. No. 3, A TRACT OF LAND, situate in Oxford township, Adams Co., near the borough line of New Oxford, on road leading from New Oxford to Berlin Junction, containing about $\frac{3}{4}$ of an acre, adjoining lands of W. D. Himes, John W. Hershey and others. This land is under a high state of cultivation and is very desirably to be sold. No. 4, A TRACT OF LAND, containing about 1 acre, partly in New Oxford Borough and partly in Oxford township, on road from New Oxford to Berlin Junction, opposite No. 3. This land has been converted into an ice and fish pond, and is very conveniently arranged for these purposes. Parties wishing to view any of these properties can do so by calling on Geo. L. Colestock, at Sheely & Bro.'s store, in New Oxford. Sale to commence at 1 o'clock, p. m., sharp, when terms will be made known by D. H. MELHORN, GEO. C. SHEELY, Administrators (with will annexed.) Geo. L. Colestock, Auctioneer.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

The Most Successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain in its effects and does not blister. Read proof below:

Brooklyn, Conn., May 5, '90.
Dr. B. J. Kendall Co.:
Sirs:—Last Summer I cured a Curb upon my horse with your celebrated Kendall's Spavin Cure and it was the best job I ever saw done. I have a dozen empty bottles, having used it with perfect success, curing every thing I tried it on. My neighbor had a horse with a very bad spavin that made him lame. He asked me how to cure it. I recommended Kendall's Spavin Cure. He cured the spavin in just three weeks.

Yours respectfully,
WILCOIT WINTER.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, April 4, '90.
Dr. B. J. Kendall Co.:
Sirs:—I have seen several bottles of Kendall's Spavin Cure and I am convinced it is the best I ever used. One man said to me, it was the best Powder I ever kept and the best he ever used.

Respectfully,
OTTO L. HOFFMAN.

CUTTENBURG, N. Y., May 19, '90.
Dear Sirs:—I have used several bottles of your Kendall's Spavin Cure with perfect success, on a valuable and blooded mare that was quite lame with a Bone Spavin. The mare is now entirely free from lameness and shows no signs of the joint.

Respectfully,
F. H. HUTTONS.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

MONROE, La., May 5, '90.
Dr. B. J. Kendall Co.:
Gents:—I think it my duty to render you my thanks for your famous Kendall's Spavin Cure. I had a four year old filly which I prized very highly. She had a severe spavin on her leg. I tried about eight different kinds of medicines which did no good. I purchased a bottle of your Kendall's Spavin Cure which cured her in four days.

I remain yours,
LEMON DOWDSE.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. All druggists have it on hand for you, or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors.

SUDDEN DEATH.—On last Thursday morning Mrs. Charles Clunk, residing between Abbotstown and East Berlin, was suddenly stricken by death. She had arose from her bed and was making a fire in the stove preparatory to getting the morning meal, when she fell to the floor, and expired a short time thereafter. She was aged about 50 years.

On Friday Mr. Peter Haverstick, of Straban township, went to the barn to attend to his stock. Some time afterward his lifeless body was found at the corn crib, where he was getting corn to feed his stock with, as several ears had been put into a basket.
It is supposed that death was instan-taneous as there was no sign of a struggle.

On the same day Mrs. Emanuel Chronister, of near Hendrix's Station,
Oxford township, also died very suddenly, though she has been ailing for some time. Her husband had asked her what she wished for her dinner and on being told had left her sitting on a chair while he absented himself to have her meal prepared. He had scarcely left the room ere he was recalled by a son, and he had scarcely re-entered the room before his wife was a corpse. She was about 65 years of age.

Mr. George Trone, of Penn township, York county, died very suddenly Sunday night. He retired in his usual good health, but about midnight was seized with a coughing spell, the strain of which bursted a blood vessel, and he bled to death in less than half an hour. He was in the 58th year of his age.

FROM SUNNYSIDE—There has been entirely too much thieving going on in this neighborhood lately. Mr. Sol.
Meales is short 40 bushels of corn,
Wm. McCans about 10 bushels and Chas. Michner a lot of chickens.

Mrs. Isaac Byers fell on the ice last Wednesday and broke her arm.

Miss Esther Griest, of Flora Dale,
started on Monday for Philadelphia,
where she remained until Wednesday
when she went to New York and sailed for Europe on the steamer "City of New York," of the Inman Line. She will be abroad for about 4 months.

Most men, other wise strong in body

vation Oil they would find relief at once. Price 25c.

All the keys of Windsor Castle were recently stolen, but even this does not interfere with the rapid sale of Dr.
Bull's Cough Syrup.

The Hanover Citizen says; The W. M. R. R. baggage room at this place was broken into some time Friday night, and robbed of about $20 in cash and $150 of vouchers that are valueless to anybody but the company's officials. The property stolen was a remittance from the agent at Hanover Junction, sent here Friday evening to be forwarded to Baltimore next morning. It was left in charge of the baggage master here as the proper official to hold it. He, of course, placed it in the baggage room. There are several windows in the room, each grated with heavy iron grating on the outside. The thief gained an entrance to the room
by prying the grating from one of the windows with a heavy iron bar. It was found that the inside catch that locked the lower window frame was simply turned, and not broken, thus permitting the window to be easily hoisted after the iron grating was removed. The circumstance also leads to the belief that the burglar is familiar with the premises and probably was in the room and opened the catch during the day. Officer Egger is quietly investigating the matter,
but has not, as yet, located the thief.

SUICIDE.—On Thursday of last week
Miss Emma Batterman, residing at
Mr. Amos Hostetter's, near Rebert's mill, in Union township, took a dose of poison. Medical assistance was procured but of no avail, as she died on Tuesday morning. She was in the 19th year of her age, and subject to spells of melancholy, caused it is thought, by liver troubles. The remains were taken to the home of her parents, near Mummaburg, on Wednesday afternoon, for interment.

FESTIVAL AND ENTERTAINMENT.—The New Oxford Public schools will give an entertainment in Miller's Hall on Saturday afternoon and evening, December 13th, for the purpose of raising funds for the purchase of an organ. The festival will consist of oysters, ice cream, taffy, cake, pop corn, bananas, &c. The entertainment in the evening will consist of readings,
recitations, songs, organ performances, &c. Admission 10cts., to the evening entertainment, which will entitle the holder to the amount of 10cts worth of refreshments.

THE SEVENTY-SECOND CASE.—Wm.
Arch McClean, Esq., Master in the equity case of the seventy-second Pennsylvania regiment against the Battlefield Association, has finished his report. Under the rules he had to notify the attorneys concerned of this fact so that they could prepare exceptions and argue them before the filing of the report in court on the 15th inst. The Master finds against the Association and enters a degree enjoining the Association from interfering with the erection of the monument. The attorneys for the Association are preparing exceptions to the report and if they convince the Master that he has made errors in his findings, he may change
the report before it is filed in court.

ACCIDENT.—The train on the G. &
H. Railroad, which is due here at 10 o'clock, was two hours late yesterday morning. The detention was caused by the spreading of a "frog" at Gulden's Station, which derailed the entire train except the engine. Had no stop been made at the station, a serious accident would certainly have happened.—Star.

TO THE AFFLICTED.—Mr. G. B. Nace,
agent for C. U. Hoke's wonderful

THREE PRISONERS ESCAPE.—On Friday evening the community was startled with the announcement that three prisoners had broken jail. They were Paul F. Kappes, awaiting trial for breaking into F. R. Schriver's store, and Charles A. and Jacob Long, for the stealing of Mr. W. H. Deatrich's horses. The escape was made thro'
the window of Charles Long's cell,
the second one on the left hand side of the corridor. Soon after supper
one after another went into the cell,
where the middle bar in the small window had been sawed out, leaving a very narrow space, less than a foot, through which they escaped into the yard by aid of a blanket, first tasing off their clothing. Under the window were found a pipe, a sleeve button and several shirts. In the cell were a table and chair upon which they stood to file and which aided in getting them out. The jail wall was scaled by aid of a heavy rope knotted at regular intervals and fastened to the top of the wall. Their absence was noticed at 7.20, when the jailor went to lock them up for the night. Search was at once instituted in all directions
but no clue found until Sunday morning, when information reached Deputy McIlhenney (Sheriff Taughinbaugh having gone in the direction of Baltimore), that Kappes and perhaps the other two were secreted in the house of Wm. Kappes, on the York pike near the first gate. He and Chief-of-Police Myers organized a posse and surrounded the house.
After a diligent search, the escaped man was found between the ceiling of the second story room and the garret floor, a board having been sawed out and nailed down after he got into his close quarters. A revolver of heavy calibre was in his possession, but he had no opportunity to use
it. The uncle was brought along with Paul and placed in jail for concealing and aiding an escaped prisoner. Later in the afternoon Herman Kappes, a brother of Paul's was arrested and placed in jail on the same charge the officers having considerable difficulty in securing his arrest. The theory that the Long brothers were also in the vicinity has been pretty well exploded, their course having been most likely in the direction of Maryland. The other horse thief, Isaac Wolf, did not get away with the rest; whether he could not get away or did not want to is not known.

William and Herman Kappes had a hearing yesterday before Justice
Hill and were held in default of $800
bail for aiding in the escape and concealing an escaped prisoner.—Compiler.

The receipts of the French treasury are larger than those of any other civilized nation.

April 15, 1861, was the first day of the late Civil War, and May 1, 1865, was its last. This has been officially decided by the United States War Department.

In Paris out of the 2,700,000 residents it is calculated that one in eighteen or 150,000, live on charity with a tendency toward crime. In London the proportion is one in thirty.

It is reported, chronicles the Philadelphia Ledger, that when a certain member of the Ohio Assembly wanted to emphasize his action in supporting a certain measure, he responded to the roll call: "I vote aye, with a big E."

The fisheries division of the Census Bureau, at Washington, received the following from a town in Western Kansas: "We have no fish here, as we have not yet succeeded in finding a variety that can live on prairie grass."

The Philadelphia Record estimates that the "average wages of persons who work on farms and in the mechanical arts is $1 per day. This being the case, Mr. David A. Wells puts the cost of the Federal Government this year in a striking light when he says it will take 480,000,000 days work to pay the $460,000,000 appropriated by Congress.

Rev. Edward Everett Hale is of the opinion that Rhode Island was not named in consequence of its resemblance to the Island of Rhodes, as he doubts whether the early settlers knew much about the shape of the Mediterranean island. Dr. Hale thinks that, as rhododendrons grow wild in all parts of Rhode Island, its name may have been derived from that flower.

Young Cassin, the bell-boy, who stole $16,000 from the Hotel Vendome, New York City, has been sentenced to hard labor for ten years. There was no possible ground for clemency, opines the World. He philosophically remarked to the landlord of the hotel that he would serve his time and then enjoy his stolen money, which was more than he could earn in ten years honestly. It would be poetic justice if somebody were to play a philosophic theft on the money in the decade of Cassin's imprisonment.

Official figures of the census seem to show, according to Frank Leslie's Weekly, that the cities of Texas are enjoying the most general and generous prosperity. The increase of population since 1880 in a half dozen Texas cities, ranges from 145 to 268 per cent. Mississippi appears to have but two cities showing a decided increase, and Alabama has one, Birmingham, with a phenomenal growth of 750 per cent. during the past ten years. On the whole, the showing for Texas is one of the best that has been made by any State, east or west, north or south. Evidently its prosperity is based upon a solid foundation.

It is proposed to increase the facilities for obtaining warning of coming storms by utilizing the telephone. M. Faye, a leading authority of the French Academy of Sciences, has asserted his belief in the feasibility of the plan, and he is of opinion that the telephone is capable of transmitting storm sounds and of predicting a tempest at least twelve hours before it bursts. There seems no reason to believe that the telephone cannot be used for the purpose, as satisfactory work has been done on somewhat the same lines by the microphone, by which instrument, indeed, most reliable indications of subterranean disturbances are now obtained.

The dog of the season seems, avers the New York World, to be the great Dane. The vogue of the pug is a thing of the past, and the fancy which women of more or less extreme tendencies showed for bulldogs has died from its own extravagance. The Danes are about the size of well-developed tigers and resemble those creatures in general appearance. Their huge muscles stand out on their shoulders and haunches, and their close-cropped hair, short ears and massive jaws give them a fierce and, in some instances, an awe-inspiring appearance. People shrink from the dog in the streets, as a rule, but there is no necessity for fear. The huge animals are as gentle and inoffensive as kittens, and their temper is so equable that nothing short of the most serious kind of an imposition will drive them to resentment.

TO MY MOTHER.

How fair you are, my mother!
Ah, though 'tis many a year
Since you were here,
Still do I see your beautiful face,
And with the glow
Of your dark eyes cometh a grace
Of long ago,
So gentle, too, my mother;
Just as of old, upon my brow,
Like benedictions now,
Falleth your dear hand's touch,
And still, as then,
A voice that glads me overmuch
Cometh again.
My fair and gentle mother!

How you have loved me, mother,
I have not power to tell—
Knowing full well
That even in the rest above
It is your will
To watch and guard me with your love,
Loving me still,
And, as of old, my mother,
I am content to be a child,
By mother's love beguiled
From all these other charms;
So, to the last,
Within thy dear, protecting arms
Hold thou me fast,
My guardian angel, mother!

THE DOOR THAT STOOD AJAR

When young Mr. Powers came to New York, his father, the pastor of the flock in Connecticut in which Mr. Powers had been reared, gave him a letter to Mrs. Mills.

Mrs. Mills was the widow of the Rev. O. B. Mills, and kept a select boarding house. It was an eminently respectable boarding house, and it was clean and orderly. It was a social privilege to belong to it, although there was little else of consequence on the dinner table but the silver fruit dish with which the parishioners of the late Rev. O. B. Mills had presented him when he gave up his charge.

Nor was the boarding house very well heated, and one night, indeed, Mrs. Mills had come suddenly in the hall bedroom occupied by young Mr. Powers, and had observed him reading by his student lamp wrapped in his overcoat and with a coverlet around his knees. He was so distressed at this that she overlooked the slight to her management, and after that Mr. Powers kept the door locked, and when his landlady knocked hastened to rid himself of his wraps before admitting her, for he was a gentle soul and thoughtful for others, and did not wish to hurt her feelings again.

New York, which had promised to be so full of strange and moving possibilities, disappointed Mr. Powers. He read law all day and E. P. Roe's novels at night, or escorted the Misses Mills to concerts and lectures or on their rounds of good works in the missions. They were enthusiastically philanthropic, and were lady directors of a society that sent little waifs of the slums to the seashore for one week at $5 a week.

Their talk around the tea table with the silver fruit dish upon it was chiefly of laws for ameliorating the condition of the factory girls, or to give the salesladies, as they conscientiously called them, the right to sit down "during hours."

Young Mr. Powers blinked at them across the table through his spectacles, and smoothed his light hair abstractedly with his hand. He wondered if this was the sort of life in a great metropolis he was always to lead. It was not at all the sort of life he had promised himself, or that he had read about, and he felt dimly that it was not the only one. He doubted if it could be, and felt, uncertainly, that he would some day rebel—he did not know quite clearly as yet against what, but he would rebel.

Where were the fascinating wickedness and the temptations of a great city which his father had warned him against; where were they to be found? Why did the adventures which befel others pass him by, why was not the romance, the stirring, throbbing life of the great centre to be his?

He determined finally to seek for it as Haroun Al Raschid sought it, or as De Musset and Dickens sought it. He would go forth and wander in the streets at night and drag it out, even though it cost him his peace of mind and his reputation. Waifs of the slums and polite conversation over tea and canned fruits were not satisfying. Adventure, romance and crime even, were what he felt that he must taste.

And in this spirit and in this pursuit did he first stumble across the house with the barred shutters.

It came about on a warm night early in the summer. The house stood on the corner of Sixth avenue and Twenty-fourth street, and its lower floor was rented by a man who sold cigars. Young Mr. Powers was walking home to supper one evening when he noticed two men stop in front of the side door on the cross street. They glanced up and down the street as if fearful of observation or pursuit, and then dodged through the partly opened door, as if diving into space, and closed it behind them.

But not so quickly but that young Mr. Power saw that beyond it was a richly furnished hallway lit by a hanging lamp and guarded by a colored servant in brilliant livery.

A club, perhaps, thought young Mr. Powers. But why this precipitation? Why is the outer door left ajar? and why does no light come from the upper windows? He felt that he was upon the brink of a terrible discovery. What it might be he could not guess, but he had read of opium joints spread with Turkish rugs and rich divans, of gambling dens as gorgeous as the throne room in a palace, and of grand halls in shabby buildings where men played with their souls for stakes. He had also read that they were murdered frequently and dropped down trap doors into loathsome cellars. His reading had been as varied as his experience had been limited.

He crossed the street and gazed long and earnestly at the house with the closed shutters. They were green and latticed, but no light came through them from within. The shutters were all closed. Not one by any chance stood ajar. It was as if death itself lay within, so silent and secret and mysterious were the windows. He thought about little else but his discovery that night, and next morning he passed the house on the way to his office with eyes alert and watchful. And every other morning and evening after that he passed it with an upward glance and with inward surmises. It grew and fastened upon him, it became his one idea of all that was wicked in New York and all that was beyond him. Before two weeks had passed he had enacted within its walls every vice and adventure known to romance.

And at last he finally determined to enter the cigar store below and see if by some clever questioning he might not learn why the side door always stood ajar and why the blinds were never opened.

"What sort of a cigar will you have?" asked the man.

Now, Mr. Powers did not smoke, so he only said: "A good cigar," to which the man said: "Here are some imported ones—two for a quarter."

Mr. Powers hesitated. He could not decide upon which question to ask first. "Perhaps you like them milder?" suggested the dealer, putting back the cigars.

At this Mr. Powers lost his presence of mind and said: "No, these will do," and picking up the cigars, he left the shop.

It did not strike him until after he had crossed the street that he had gained but little information. But then the storekeeper might have suspected his errand and these idle questions about the color of the cigars were only intended to throw him off. He was certain of this at last, and the interest in his adventure increased.

And one night the opportunity presented itself and he seized it. He decided that this was his chance and approached the cabman frankly, but with much inward trepidation.

"That house," he said, smiling in what he believed to be a knowing and conciliatory manner, "it's a little bit mysterious, isn't it—something queer about it, eh?"

"It's Case's gambling house, said the cab-driver indifferently, as he tossed the blanket over his horse. "Why?"

Mr. Powers's worst suspicions were realized and he blinked at this man's matter-of-fact acceptance of the truth.

"Oh, nothing much," he said, and then he asked, prompted to do so by he knew not what, "Can any one go in?"

"Not any one," said the cabman, after some consideration; "you could, I guess, if you wanted to."

"And what's the limit?" asked young Mr. Powers. He did not in the least know what this meant, but he had heard or read of some such an expression and he thought it sounded well. Some evil spirit seemed to lead him on; he felt that this was the case and that instead of lingering here in talk with this man he should have fled at once.

"Oh, you can play anything you like," returned the cabman, "anything from $15 to $1500. I'll introduce you to the man on the door if you want. I guess you're a stranger in New York, aren't you?"

"No, thank you," gasped Mr. Powers hurriedly, "not to-night, some other night perhaps."

Mr. Powers went to bed that night sincerely thankful that he had resisted temptation, but he knew in his heart that it was but for that night and that sooner or later he would make his protest against the uneventful life he was leading and enter that house with the barred shutters.

There was, however, one practical and humiliating safeguard against his beginning a career of crime. It was the $15 which the cabman had quoted as the minimum. His allowance was small, and it was two weeks—two weeks of great mental perturbation—before the sum was ready. While he was saving it young Mr. Powers felt that he was already a law-breaker. He suffered the uneasiness of a hypocrite, if not of a criminal, when the policeman on the beat said "Good morning" to him. When he sat with the Misses Mills around the table with the silver centrepiece upon it he felt as he was sure Eugene Aram felt when he sat among the innocent pupils in the school.

Their talk of the ways of the slums to whom they supplied fresh country air and newly-laid eggs for $5 a week, and of the poor working girls who could not sit down during hours, filled him with remorse. He wondered what they would think of him if they knew of his meditated plunge into crime. How they would shrink and turn from him and pray for him as well. But he did not forego his evil purpose. He felt that he had gone too far to retreat now. Had he not promised that cabman to return some other evening? His soul, so the young man darkly expressed it, was already sold.

It was on a Friday night, a warm, moonlit night, that he counted his money for the last time and sallied forth with a desperate frown to stake it at the house with the barred shutters. He caught a glimpse of the eldest Miss Mills as he passed the parlor door. She was working at some charity clothing, while he—he shuddered at the distance between them, but he felt that he must taste of this forbidden knowledge, or remain in untempted and untried ignorance. He approached the house circumspectly, and on the opposite side of the street to that on which it stood. He almost hoped that he would find it gone, and that he could even yet return to the Misses Mills as unspotted as he had been when he first met them.

But the house was there, and the door ajar, with the glimpse of the lighted hall within. He crossed the streets and looked about him fearfully, for it seemed to him as if every window held some one who watched him, who recognized his purpose. Then he placed his hand upon the door, but at the same instant it opened from within, and two men laughing and talking boisterously strode out past him.

This sudden interruption unsettled Mr. Powers, and he walked hastily around the block to calm himself. He abused himself for his own lack of spirit, and determined to make the attempt again, and that this time nothing should balk him. He took the money, which he had changed into three $5-bills, in one hand and walked boldly and rapidly to the door. Young Mr. Powers hesitated no longer. His career was to begin at once, and he was at last to start upon that fast, fascinating life of which he had dreamed and which had been denied him.

He noticed—without mental comment, for he was too greatly excited—that there seemed to a number of men approaching the place from many directions, but he did not care now if the whole world saw him. He placed his hand on the door knob and stood for an instant in the strong light of the hall. Then from behind him he heard a sudden rush of many feet, a man shoved him aside and pushed past him, another and another followed. He was hustled and shouldered out on to the sidewalk. He heard a terrified yell from some one inside the building, the answer of many excited voices, the crashing and breaking of tables and chairs and the rattle of hundreds of scattered ivory chips.

"What is it, oh, what is it?" he grasped, turning to a man at his elbow.

"It's a raid," answered the man, grimly. "The police have pulled it."

"The police!" Young Mr. Powers turned sick with fear, and there was left to him but one idea—to escape. He brushed past the man and through the people, who came running up on every side, and flew at a racing pace toward the boarding-house kept by Mrs. Mills.

He felt the hand of an officer on his shoulder at every step; he saw himself marched through the public streets; he pictured his name in all the papers, and his irreproachable family weeping on their knees at the cell door.

He was panting and breathless when he raced up the steps of his boarding-house and looked fearfully over his shoulder. The street was still and deserted and showed calmly and peacefully in the moonlight. He had escaped, but by so little—so very little. The hand that held his latchkey fumbled with the lock, and it was with a start of guilty fear that he confronted the elder Miss Mills, who came to open the door for him.

"Why, Mr. Powers," she said sympathetically in her gentle tones, "what can be the matter? you look so pale."

Young Mr. Powers became conscious that he still held the gambling fund, the awful evidence of his guilty purpose, in his hand. He never wanted to look at it again.

"Miss Mills," he said, "nothing's the matter. And, Miss Mills," he added breathlessly, "here's fifteen dollars. It will take three waifs to the seashore for one week."—New York Sun.

A Hindoo's Politeness.

The elaborate politeness of an educated Hindoo is something remarkable. Here, for instance, is the way a young Hindoo clerk recently wrote to his employer:

Most Exalted Sir: It is with the most habitually devout expressions of my sensitive respect that I approach the clemency of your masterful position with the self-dissipating utterance of my esteem, and the also forgotten-by-myself assurance that in my own mind I shall be freed from the assumption that I am asking unpardonable donations if I assert that I desire a short respite from my exertions; indeed, a fortnight holiday, as I am suffering from three boils, as per margin.

I have the honorable delight of subscribing myself your exalted reverence's servant.

A Famous Old Land Grant.

A famous old land grant was brought to notice recently in the office of Secretary of State.

It was that made on the 13th of June, 1760, by George II to Mary Bossumworth, a half breed Indian.

This woman is a picturesque figure in Colonial history. She was of great service to the settlers, too; and the grant was made for her kindness to them.

The King granted her St. Catharine's Island, of 6200 acres. The original plat has been lost, but the grant is faithfully recorded in the archives of the department.—Atlanta Constitution.

NEWS AND NOTES FOR WOMEN.

Plush is out of date.

Lady Londonderry has given up her projected visit to America.

Agnes Huntington is called the Mary Anderson of the lyric stage.

Queen Victoria has a large hand and takes a seven and a half glove.

Women are exclusively employed in the hand weaving of Turkish carpets.

A soft cashmere with a brocade of irregular spots is new, but somewhat stiff.

All the colors of the rainbow radiate from seemingly white glassware importations.

Shawls of every sort are made in dresses for exclusive wearers by private modistes.

Mrs. Mary E. Bryan, of New York City, writes a novel by contract every three months.

An exquisite satan duchess, with large floral embellishments in silver gray, is the very acme of elegance.

Buckskin vests and trimmings are an expensive caprice which will only be adopted by women of wealth.

The Amazon cloths appear with a new face, for beside the plum colors and the speckled surfaces they are checked.

Black and white is a favorite combination in new hats. Black felts are trimmed with white feathers, and vice versa.

A well-dressed woman always takes care to be well shod and well gloved, if her dress and bonnet are not in the very latest fashion.

A late novelty in silks is a black figure on a tinted or colored ground. The newest of these is figured in a flowing ribbon design.

The girl dude is now haunting the fashionable tailor, who is fashioning all sorts of manish top coats, jackets, waistcoats and habit shirts.

Windmill decanter sets of brass work and red Bohemian glass are ornamental in the highest degree. Those harp decanters vie with horn in design.

There's a vast difference between the woman who puts things on and she who is dressed. A few women have the knack of always appearing well dressed.

Light colored felts will be more in vogue this winter than the black or dark colored ones. They will be trimmed with velvet ribbon or flowers of another color.

Tiny bouquets in charming colors sprinkled over lustrous satin ground suggest recollections of the cherished brocades by which our grandmothers set such store.

Bridemaids' bouquets are very small, and made of rare and costly flowers veiled in tulle. The stems are usually bound with white satin, finished with a lace frill to protect the glove.

Helea Hunt's grave, on Cheyenne Mountain, is now marked by a heap of stones, every visitor to it casting two stones upon it in accordance with the wish of the woman-poet.

A clever Buffalo (N. Y.) woman went to England, traveled all around London, saw everything worth seeing, was gone from home only two months, and spent only $200 during her entire trip.

Mrs. E. H. Burmeyer is one of the most accomplished athletes in New York City. She walks thirty miles at an outing, makes long journeys on a bicycle, and can lift 625 pounds of iron when at her best.

According to a recently published census of Vassar College graduates it appears that of 867 young ladies whose career after leaving the institution had been learned, 815, or a little more than thirty-six per cent., had married.

Mrs. Thomas Edison is a beautiful and accomplished young woman of twenty-four, one of whose greatest difficulties in life is making her absent-minded husband realize the necessity of eating when he is hungry and resting when he is tired.

Dr. Julia Bick is the first woman to be honored by the British Medical Society. Miss Bick has contributed some valuable papers to the cause of medicine, and the society recently voted to allow her $100 to pay for the publication of a pamphlet on "The Nutrition of the Muscles."

It is not unusual for a New York woman to have three or four different schemes on hand for the winter, beside her social undertakings. Fencing, Delsarte and membership at a current literature class have been mapped out for the mornings by one young married lady of fashion.

One of the last freaks of the women who ought to know better is to inject perfumes into their arms, using a hypodermic syringe for the purpose. Skin poisoning and abscesses are a few of the evils likely to ensue, so there is small danger of the senseless practice becoming common.

A Mohammedan young woman has just closed her medical studies in Odessa, Russia, with a brilliant examination. Her name is Kutiojariff-Hanum. She is the first Mohammedan woman who has received an M. D.'s diploma, and the State has granted her special permission to practice her profession.

A home for women teachers was opened last fall, at Dresden, Germany, in a building of its own. Teachers of any nation can stay at the home temporarily for forty or fifty cents a day and enjoy the benefit of a local teachers' association. Retired German teachers can live here with one room for $150, or with two, for $175 a year.

IT'S A CENTURY SINCE INDUSTRIAL AMERICA CROWNED THEM.

Coal and cotton—what enormous industries do these two words suggest, and who could believe on the first suggestion that the American centennial of the inauguration of these industries is yet to be celebrated? But it is even so. True, some little work was done in both long before, but the great coal mines of Pennsylvania were not discovered till 1791, and on the 12th day of July, 1790, Samuel Slater first started his machines at Pawtucket, R. I., and soon after the manufacturing of cotton was an assured success.

In 1791 Philip Ginter lived on the mountain side near the site of the present Meach Chunk, Penn. The forest was in its primitive state, game was plenty and he was a good hunter. In one excursion he found a large tree recently uprooted, and in the cavity thus formed was a peculiar "black stone," which excited his curiosity, and he took a specimen to Colonel Jacob Weiss, neighbor whom he suspected of superior knowledge. That gentleman pronounced it "stone coal" and sent specimens to Philadelphia. The savants declared it was too hard to be valuable, but Mr. Charles Cist, a printer, declared otherwise, and, after a long struggle, organized a small company to mine it—and thus was the first anthracite coal in Pennsylvania developed.

In 1810 anthracite was found near Pottsville, and the blacksmiths there succeeded in making it burn, and in 1811 some was sent to Philadelphia. The man who tried to sell it was threatened with arrest for attempting a swindle. One firm, however, tried it in a furnace and after some hours of blowing and sweating the laborers quit in disgust, fastened the furnace doors and went to dinner. When they returned the furnace doors were red hot. The secret was discovered—anthracite coal was to be ignited and then simply let alone. In 1812 the Lehigh Company began again and shipped 365 tons; they made it 10,000 tons the next year, 2240 the next and 4500 the next. The increase thereafter was rapid, a railroad coming in 1828 bringing the coal to the river. In 1830 the Lehigh Company shipped 41,000 tons; 225,000 in 1840 and 722,000 in 1850. In 1857 Pennsylvania produced 34,641,007 tons of anthracite and about 50,000,000 tons of bituminous. Then came the great strike, and immediately after it natural gas, and for figures of the actual effects we must wait this year's census.

It is queer that mankind was so slow to discover the value of coal, though Theophrastus mentions that the smiths of ancient Elis used a sort of stone for their forges which he called "lithnathra." The Romans cut roads and aqueducts through the coal beds of France and never used the mineral. In England it was certainly used as early as A. D. 8 but the discovery of cinders indicates that the Britons used it before the Roman occupation. It was burned in London as early as 1300 and in 1785 only 61,000 tons of iron were made with coal. It is now estimated that the power created by burning coal in Great Britain is equal to the labor of 600,000,000 men and that is but one-third the amount used by the world, the United States now being nearly or quite equal to another country.

In the cotton industry the West Indians were still slower, and the really successful American crop grown in South Carolina in 1790. It is known that the cotton manufacture of India flourished some 140 years B. C. and the indications are that the business had continued long before that, as would be required to bring it to perfection. The civilized people of Europe imported cotton goods from India centuries before establishing manufactures of their own, and contrary to what is generally believed, the manufacture in England is but little older than in America.

Captain Henry F. Jenks, of Pawtucket, who is organizing the centennial, proposes that every cotton manufacturing firm in the United States shall furnish one stone to make a monument for Slater, to be surmounted by his statue. The growth of the manufacture has been remarkably regular for seventy years, the war era excepted, and the ratio of home consumption to exported raw cotton has varied but slightly for twenty years. In 1839 there were 10,921,146 spindles running in the United States, employing 181,623 persons, but the increase since has been very great. In the South the number doubled in seven years, the product being worth $21,000,000 in 1850, and $43,000,000 in 1857. The price of raw cotton also grows more steady as the area of production increases, a variation of two cents in a year being now rare where variations of five or ten cents were common sixty years ago.—Brooklyn City

A paragraph in a Western paper to the effect that the late Justice Miller, of the Supreme Court, was so reticent concerning the business of the court that no one was ever able to obtain from him an inkling as to the nature of decisions or pending cases, is, of course, true. He was the most scrupulous man alive, but nevertheless, on one occasion a certain ring of speculators in New York had advance information as to one of his decisions by which they made hundreds of thousands of dollars. It came about in this way: A certain widow of a certain famous general was a near neighbor and intimate friend of the Miller family. She was a woman of extravagant tastes but small income, and was suspected of mingling in the lobby to replenish her purse, but the Miller family were always her firm friends, and she was as much at home in their house as in her own. It was known that Judge Miller had prepared the opinion of the Supreme Court in what was known as the Pacific Railroad cases under the Thurman act, that he had read it at the regular conference of the justices on Saturday morning, that it had been approved by the court, and it would be delivered on the following Monday. As the decision was certain to affect the prices of all Pacific Railroad securities materially which ever way went, and as it might ruin men who held the stocks and bonds or make their fortunes, there was an intense anxiety to know its nature in advance. The agent of a New York syndicate largely interested in the securities offered the General's widow $50,000 if she would obtain this information. She undertook the delicate task. While the Miller family were at church Sunday morning she went to the house, entered Judge Miller's library, unlocked his desk by means of skeleton keys, and copied a portion of his opinion, which was carried to New York and was made the basis of very large transactions in stocks before the opinion was announced—about 1:30 o'clock Monday. The facts leaked out, the widow was never allowed to enter the Miller house again and was never again recognized by any of the family. In fact she was compelled to leave Washington in disgrace, but she got her $50,000.

Chicago News.

The owner of a canary or other singing bird sometimes has occasion to catch it for the purpose of examining closely, as, for instance, when the bird has received a hurt. When the bird is not perfectly tame and fears to be touched, this task is not a pleasant one to a tender-hearted person, for the little creature flutters around and dashes against the bars of its cage at the risk of hurting itself and of aggravating soreness which it may have.

The London Police.

The metropolitan police force is under the control of any local authority.

The metropolitan police force is under the control of any local authority but are directed by commissioners who are responsible to the Home Office of the general government. There is a strong demand in London for the transfer of police authority to the County Council and the subject has provoked much discussion. It is urged that the concentration of imperial and national interests in London is so vastly important, that higher authorities should maintain control of the police in protection of those central concerns that pertain to the greatest capital in the world. Ultimately a compromise will probably be reached. The County Council certainly has to have some share in the administration of the metropolis.—Tuesday.

An important innovation has been introduced in the shape of a machine for preparing moulds for casting. The machine is designed to produce a complete mould at one operation, and thus to place skilled hand labor in making moulds from pattern plates. It is claimed that a lad can operate the machine with the assistance of a laborer, and is able to run and mould as many as 1000 boxes per day.

Mrs. Barton gives some curious facts about dog life in Syria and other Eastern countries. Dogs exist there by hundreds and thousands, without owners or care, and are a kind of communal property by themselves. Each one belongs to a particular quarter of the city, and is not allowed to live elsewhere. She treated them kindly and fed them, while the inhabitants beat and stoned them, and in gratitude they undertook to escort and defend her from harm. When a went out to walk a dog always met her as if appointed by the whole community to accompany her to the border of the boundary, and passed her over to one lodging to that quarter, who did the same thing in his turn. Each dog wagged his tail as if bidding good-bye when his work was done. She says: she has often in the quiet night heard a dog come barking from the foot of the mountains. Meeting the dogs on the border of the village, there would be a quiet for a few minutes, then a general barking in concert; then one dog would start for the middle of the village, with a similar result there; then a single dog again for the further side of the village followed by a general barking throughout. "Whatever the canine news is," she says, "in about twenty minutes it is passed round to all the dogs in Damascus."

NEWSPAPERARCHIVE

FRIDAY EVENING, DEC. 12, 1890.

A VALUABLE DISCOVERY.—Dr. Brown Sequard's elixer of youth may be an important discovery. But every one knows that Dr. Franklin Miles' New Heart Cure certainly is. It has given thousands afflicted with heart disease a New Lease on Life. Druggists who observe its effects on many customers everywhere speak very highly of it. Mr. John Weaver, of Knightstown, Ind., says: "I have sold much of Dr. Miles' New Cure and have received many good reports." O. Monroe, of Dunkirk, N. Y., reports large sales. "And the best part of it is every bottle has given satisfaction." Sold and guaranteed by J. W. Dicks.

Senator Cullom introduced a bill to reduce the postage on all letters for any point in the United States, and all drop letters, after July 1, weighing one-half ounce or less, to one cent, with an additional charge of one cent for every fraction of an ounce in excess.

GREAT DISCOVERERS.—What Bell and Edison are to the telephone and electricity, says the Pittsburg News, Dr. Franklin Miles, the well-known specialist in nervous diseases, is to the nervous system and nerve fluid. Among his numerous discoveries the Restorative Nervine is undoubtedly one of the greatest. It is unsurpassed in nervousness, dyspepsia, headache, epilepsy, neuralgia, backache, melancholy, sleeplessness, change of life, etc. Free trial bottles of it may be had of J. W. Dicks, druggist. All should read his "New and Startling Facts for the Afflicted," a very able, interesting, and finely illustrated book. Free to all.

A small quantity of Professor Koch's lymph for the cure of tuberculosis was delivered to Dr. Abraham Jacoby, of New York. It came by mail in a phial on the steamship Werra and was sent by Dr. Koch himself.

A SCRAP OF PAPER SAVES HER LIFE.—It was just an ordinary scrap of wrapping paper, but it saved her life. She was in the last stages of consumption, told by physicians that she was incurable and could live only a short time; she weighed less than seventy pounds. On a piece of wrapping paper she read of Dr. King's New Discovery, and got a sample bottle; it helped her, she bought a large bottle, it helped her more, bought another and grew better fast, continued its use and is now strong, healthy, rosy, plump, weighing 140 pounds. For fuller particulars send stamp to W. H. Cole, druggist, Fort Smith. Trial bottles of this wonderful discovery free at Dicks' drug store.

Delamater & Co., of Meadville, made an assignment for the benefit of their creditors. Hotchkiss and McClintock, assignees, took immediate possession and are preparing a statement for the public.

EUPESY.—This is what you ought to have, in fact, you must have it, to fully enjoy life. Thousands are searching for it daily, and mourning because they find it not. Thousands upon thousands of dollars are spent annually by our people in the hope that they may attain this boon. And yet it may be had by all. We guarantee that Electric Bitters, if used according to directions and the use persisted in, will bring you good digestion and oust the demon dyspepsia and install instead Eupesy. We recommend Electric Bitters for dyspepsia and all diseases of liver, stomach and kidneys. Sold at 50c. and $1 per bottle by J. W. Dicks, druggist.

A man named Clarence Ziller, a ranchman, of Meeker, Colorado, has been arrested. He is thought to be Tascott, the murderer of Snell.

Your wasted cheeks may have all the plumpness and bloom of health through your use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This time-honored remedy still leads the van. It improves digestion, purifies the blood, and invigorates the system. Give it a trial.

A Womelsdorf man has made a wager to eat 500 oysters at one sitting.

EVERY HOME SHOULD HAVE IT.—It is not always convenient to call a physician for every little ailment. Having Red Flag Oil in the house you have a physician always at hand. It kills rheumatism, neuralgia, burns, bruises, and all aches and pains. Price 25 cents.

There are few things in this life of which we may be certain, but this is one of them. Pan Tuna cough and consumption cure has no equal for coughs, colds and consumption. Price 25 and 50 cents, at Barnitz's drug store.

Nine persons lost their lives by the collapse of a blast furnace at Joliet, Ill. It was previously stated that but 5 had been killed.

It was 17 degrees below zero at Fryeburg, Me., last Wednesday morning.

The harsh, drastic purgatives, once deemed so indispensable, have given place to milder and more skillfully prepared laxatives; hence the great and growing demand for Ayer's Pills. Physicians everywhere recommend them for constiveness, indigestion and liver complaints.

Shellbarks are very scarce and sell at $5 a bushel in the cities.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.
